THREE-DAY CERTIFICATE COURSE

ON

"PUBLIC PROCUREMENT, TENDERING AND LAW RELATING TO GOVERNMENT CONTRACTS"

About the Course

Contract being agreements enforceable by law, offers personal rights, and imposes personal obligations, which the law protects and enforces against the parties to the agreement. A contract to which The Central Government or a State Government, or its affiliate is a party is camouflaged under the covers of being a 'Government Contract'.

In law in India, with the Indian Contract Act 1872 in the background, does not prescribe any special procedure for execution of contracts. However, the position of law relating to execution of Government Contracts is well-defined in accordance with Article 299 of the Constitution of India. However, it does not necessarily imply that the provisions of the Indian Contract Act have been superseded completely; yet the formalities as imposed by Article 299 and the strict compliance of the same have been regarded by some as being extremely inconvenient and restrictive to government operations in practice, due to the procedural requirements. Consequently, the Courts have in the manner of delivering judgements mitigated the rigours of the formalities contained in Article 299(1), and have enforced contracts upon substantial compliance, and not strict compliance with the requirements of Article 299(1) of the Constitution of India.

aggrieved party for the damages suffered. Therefore, it is indispensable for the State to act in fairness even in contracts with private parties, where there is an involvement of administrative machinery.

The Government, post liberalisation and globalisation, has ventured into practices that were hitherto unexplored such as Public-Private Partnerships. The Increase in private partaking with the governments in areas such as oil fields exploration contracts, defence equipment manufacturing, infrastructure and other key fields has thrown open several challenges, procedural and substantial, over time. Few other areas that have witnessed key issues in procurement issues and contractual irregularities, furthering them into long legal battles have been those of Highways, Power Sector, Airports, Defence Procurements and Manufacturing, Oil and Gas et. Cetera. Further, the recent window for private participation in manufacturing units is in the Nuclear Energy sector, wherein few private players are engaged in the supply of minor-key components in the setting-up of civil nuclear facilities in the country. Tendering and bidding procedures are held in each case and since the opening of the tenders, the procurement process starts for all government contracts. This course also aims chiefly to work on the better understanding of the participants in the respective manner.

Taking into account the increasing participation of private players in such areas and multiple Government contracts being executed, it becomes essential to understand the processes, legal perspectives and challenges faced by multiple stakeholders while entering into and in the execution of such contacts.

The Three Day Professional Certificate Course on 'Public Procurement, Tendering And Law Relating To Government Contracts' will analyse the law, policy, issues and framework relating to government contracts from a legal, constitutional, industry and compliance perspective, thereby providing a broader outlook that aids and articulates contractual decision making. The objective of the programme is to introduce and facilitate the understanding of the subject by means of Case Studies which will enable the better understanding of technical know-how and catering to the specialised needs of the participants

About NLSIU

The National Law School of India University, the Nation's premier law university, came into existence through a Notification under the National Law School of India University Act (Karnataka Act 22 of 1986). It signified the culmination of efforts by the Judiciary, the Bar Council of India, the Karnataka Bar Council, the Bangalore University and the Government of Karnataka to reform legal education and to establish a centre of excellence for legal education and research in India.

The Law School has undertaken many research projects funded by the UGC, the Government of India, the Government of Karnataka, the Department of Women and Child Development, UN agencies, the World Bank, HIVOS, Department of Justice etc. The Projects have served to strengthen research and teaching at the Law School. The National Law School of India University since its inception has taken proactive steps in organizing conferences, seminars, workshops, refresher courses and certificate courses to update academicians, law teachers, students, industry personnel in different subject areas.

About CEERA
