Our university has taken up many programs with emphasis on learning simple Sanskrit. The first among them is a week-long Simple Sanskrit Conversation Camp organized every year after the students enter. In which it is compulsory to participate all the new comers of prak-shastri, shastri, acharya and all newly admitted students. In this program, knowledge of Sanskrit vocabulary, simple grammar learning method, Sabdarupa knowledge, Dhaturupa knowledge, Amarkasa knowledge etc. are taught in very simple manner. Students are then trained in reading, speaking and writing Sanskrit in another one-month training camp. Senior Professors of the university are guiding the students. In the same way the research scholars also emphasizes this work. The most important thing is that every child entering the university is obliged to converse in Sanskrit in the university premises. Students must talk in Sanskrit in class, hostel, mess, playground etc. All the teachers pay special attention to this. In the training camp, special attention is given to sentence writing and conversation in Sanskrit.

Every Friday, two periods are scheduled to test students' Sanskrit speaking and vocabulary skills. A Simple Sanskrit subject and a Classical Sanskrit subject are given in the bulletin on Mondays of the week. Students will give speech on any topic of their interest. The faculty members examine the students on the call of the coordinator of the Vagvardhini Parishad. There are four prizes fixed for each class. In this way twelve prizes are awarded to the students who give the best Sanskrit speech every week. This motivates the students to speak Sanskrit. In the same way Sanskrit essay writing competition conducted by Vagvardhini parishad is a best practice to develop Sanskrit writing skill of the student. About 500 scriptures of Vedas and Upanishads are inscribed on marble stones in simple Sanskrit language at various places in the university campus. As a result, students learn Sanskrit by reading those scriptures. Almost all the official information aimed at the students is given in Sanskrit so that every child becomes perfect in the use of official Sanskrit. Apart from this, various university competitions are conducted through Sanskrit language. Sanskrit routine vocabulary is practiced through simple music, sports, etc. By undertaking many such programmes, the university prepares the students for learning, writing and reading Sanskrit.
